

Looking at Inequality Through a Discipline Lens*

Presented by: Cori Fecho, PSEA UniServ Representative

November 14, 2022 ♦ Eastern Region Office
5:30 – 6:00 p.m. light dinner, 6:00 – 8:00 p.m. workshop

This session is being provided for those educators that are reflecting on their practices when working with all students. As educators work towards providing learning environments that allow all students to succeed, we must examine systemic problems that have formed that impede this from happening.

A facilitated discussion format will be used to allow participants to share and discuss their thoughts on this issue. The session will use a PBS documentary based on the groundbreaking book written by renowned scholar, Monique W. Morris, Ed.D. The view into this issue through the documentary is to guide us to be able to then reflect on our own experiences and observations within the school environments with which we work. The intention of the session is to provide the time and space to have productive conversations around the challenges we face on the issue of discipline as it is implemented. Participants will be asked to examine their own practices and interactions within the school district community.
